ABSTRACT

This manual, a basic guide to the field of English as a Second Language (ESL), including bilingual education (BE), lists nearly 1,000 U.S.-based organizations that service ESL/BE educators. The core of this guide consists of ESL-oriented data in the form of names, addresses, and telephone numbers. Resources are presented in the following categories: ESL and Bilingual Education (principal association, affiliates and related organizations, state Title VII offices and evaluation assistance centers, and multifunctional resource centers); Literacy Organizations; Related Organizations (languages and linguistics, federal agencies, foundations and research centers, special education interpreters and translators); Multicultural Organizations (ethnic societies, embassies); Immigration/Resettlement Agencies (U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service, migrant services and education, advocacy/reform/interest groups); Professional Development Opportunities (graduate education, overseas employers and brokers, travel/study/exchange programs); Publishers (books, periodicals, tests); and Media and Technology Producers (video/films, computer software). A list of postal abbreviations is included. (Adjunct ERIC Clearinghouse on Literacy Education) (LB)

INTRODUCTION

As its subtitle claims, All About ESL is a basic guide to the field of English as a Second Language. Within that reference function, this directory construes Bilingual Education (BE) to be a natural and legitimate part of its "territory", a position becoming more and more justified while these two domains -- formerly competitive -- continue to parallel each other in concept as well as cooperation.

The prime objective of All About ESL is larger than its modest dimensions may suggest, that is: to direct ESL/BE educators to the nearly 1000 USA-based organizations that service this relatively new profession. To that end, the core and corpus of this booklet consists of ESL-oriented data in the factual form of names, addresses, and toll-free telephone numbers of membership associations, embassies, graduate schools, literacy centers, government offices, consultancies, ethnic societies, immigration agencies, overseas/travel programs, and research facilities, along with pertinent publishers of books, periodicals, tests, computer software, and video/films.

Never before has such a broad scale of ESL/BE-related material been collected between two covers. Nor can any publication, regardless of its size or format, answer every single question about every single aspect of this expanding discipline. Still, I feel that All About ESL, in providing its readers with so much useful information, comes close to achieving that most global of goals.

A TRIBUTE

When I lived in Iran, I thought all Americans were white and only of European ancestry. And so, coming here was a fascinating experience -- one that changed my perception about the United States. I started seeing this country as a world in itself, with a complete mix of nationalities and opportunities for all.

FOUNDATIONS AND RESEARCH CENTERS

These two categories, though they might have been listed separately, are related closely enough to constitute a single section. Given this over-lapping, organizations with a distinct "Foundation" function are identifiable by that term within their name, while research-oriented bodies may exist under either label.

SPECIAL EDUCATION,

INTERPETERS, AND TRANSLATORS

The professions of ESL and Special Education, in their attention to language skills and "survival" instruction, share many of the same objectives. For that reason, these organizations have much to offer those two fields, in the form of materials, expertise, and philosophy.

EMBASSIES

For interested educators, most embassy offices will provide booklets or video/films describing the nation and the people they represent. These materials are useful for maintaining ethnic pride in ESL students, while instilling "other-culture" awareness in co-learners as well as teachers. Fees (if any at all) are minimal. For specifics, direct your request to the Information Officer or Cultural Attache. For information on a more global scale, contact the UN Information Center, 1889 F Street NW, Washington DC 20006; telephone 202 289 8670.

GRADUATE-LEVEL PROGRAMS

Alphabetical by Location or Name of Institution

These eighty-some programs, though not comprehensive, are believed to be geographically and qualitatively representative. They were compiled, non-evaluatively, from journal references, conference exhibits, credit-course announcements, recruiting notices, and published author affiliations. As such, this data should be useful for two different sets of educators: (1) those who seek advanced study within ESL or Bilingual Education, and (2) others who plan to recruit professionals with such training. For a complete and more detailed listing of these and hundreds of other graduate programs, consult the latest edition of TESOL's Directory of Professional Preparation Programs in the U.S; address given in the section on PUBLISHERS.

OVERSEAS EMPLOYMENT

-- US-based Employers, Recruiters, and Clearinghouses --

In addition to the organizations listed here, some nations recruit teachers of English via their embassies in Washington, D.C. If you have a particular country in mind, contact the Education Officer at the embassy address given elsewhere within this booklet. And, for educators already (or expecting to be) so engaged, the following office may be of special financial interest: US AND OVERSEAS EMPLOYEES TAX FAIRNESS COMMITTEE, 1101 Fifteenth Street NW, Washington DC 20005; telephone 202 466 8880.
